Draw Span On This Side Now Likely, Is Report

STATE COMMISSION RECOMMENDS PLAN OF UNDERSTANDING

Span On This Side Of River Necessitates Much Dredging

CONTRACTORS ON THE GROUND Seven Cars Of Material Are In Transit To Albany-Decatur

Locally it is understood that the Alabama State Highway commission has recommended that the draw span of the new $468,000 bridge to be built here be located on the Albany-Decatur side of the river and that a vast amount of work will be necessary on the part of the government for making this side of the river navigable. This action was taken, it is said, after consideration of the location of the present river channel and the necessity for river boats for swimming from one side of the stream to the other as the crossing under the two bridges is made.

Belief is general today that the above action, said to have been taken by the highway department, will necessitate the building of a much higher road on the approach for this side of the river. The roadway height contemplated for the other side of the river is understood to be about ten feet on a standard type highway, while the road on this side will now have to be from 12 to 16 feet in height.

Bridge superintendents are now on the ground for the start of actual construction by the Koss company, although materials have not yet arrived. Ground was leased several days ago for the placing of materials and more than seven carloads of machinery and materials are now in transit to this location.

No difficulty is expected now in declaring the validity of the bond issues of the two cities. According to information given today the legal phase of the issues is practically cleared up and the bonds now only have to be printed and signed by the proper authorities.

Considerable expense is expected to be added by the latest move in placing the draw span on this side of the river. Opposition to the location of the span on the other side of the river is said to have been brought when the difficulty of swinging a boat across the river from the point where one bridge is passed, until reaching the second.

State highway engineers are said to be on the ground at this time for the purpose of superintending the construction work.

BIBLE READING IN SCHOOL LIVE ISSUE

Abercrombie Issues a Warning To Teachers To Obey The Law

The question of compulsory reading of the Bible by teachers in public schools of Alabama, raised recently by State Examiner Charles McCall, in Jackson County, has become a live issue.

John W. Abercrombie, state superintendent of education, has issued a warning to teachers that they must obey the law, which provides specifically for the reading of the Bible daily at schools supported in part or in whole by state funds.

Failure to observe the statute, Superintendent Abercrombie says, will result in the teacher losing their pay. Repeated offenses will result in their dismissal, he added.

BAILEY DELIVERS TALK TO KIWANIS

Fussell To Have Charge Of The Farm Meeting

An interesting talk on the place of the merchant in the community, his problems and the solution of the problems was the subject of an interesting address delivered at noon today by Kiwanian W. M. Bailey before the regular weekly meeting of the Morgan organization. W. W. Fussell was named by President Mathews to take up the work of arrangement preliminary to the Farmers Night which will conclude the Farm Relations program of the club. The meeting is to be held in August.

Kiwanian Bailey believed that there is a great deal more to the business of merchandising than buying and selling. He spoke of the mission of the merchant. In conclusion Mr. Bailey declared that the merchant must work upon the theory of, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." At the conclusion of the splendid talk President Mathews extended the thanks of the club for so an instructive and well prepared talk.

Owing to the illness of J. W. Boggs, chairman W. W. Rahm of the Farm Relations committee, is unable to complete the year's work which has been carried successfully thus far. W. W. Fussell, executive chairman of the committee, will go ahead with all arrangements for the night when farmers from over the Morgan county section will be asked to attend the club banquet and program.

The meeting was closed at the conclusion of the address.

Morning Court Adds To July Fine Total

The morning Albany police court tolls added greatly to the ever increasing July fine total when one defendant was fined $179.80, another $51.60 and a third $26.60.

Officers Stewart, Thompson and West made the arrest of a white man charged with drunkenness, carrying concealed weapons and driving a car while intoxicated. An appeal is probable and in the mean while the defendant remains in the city jail. On negro male was fined $51.60 charged with stealing a pistol. Officer McCall made the arrest. The defendant is in jail. An alleged speeder was assessed $26.60. Traffic officer Mitchell serving the summons.

MISSIONARY FROM HERE GOES SAFELY THROUGH CHINA WAR

Harry Carter, Wife and Child Are Unhurt By The Firing

A LETTER HOME TELLS OF BATTLE

Building Occupied By Canton Book Store In Line Of Fire

Harry Carter, local resident, who served with the American forces in France for many months, who served later as secretary of the Rainbow organization, and now is a missionary in China has just gone through his second "war," according to a letter received by his relatives here.

The letter is from Canton, where Mr. and Mrs. Carter are in charge of the Canton book store. The letter bears date of June 19, when the warfare in China was in full blast. The building occupied by the store was in the line of fire, but Mr. Carter was uninjured, he writes. Mrs. Carter and child were sent to Hongkong during the worst of the fighting.

The letter follows:

Canton, June 19, 1925
Dear Folks:—
The war is over and we are quite safe and sound. Don't know what you have read about it over there, so I'll try to give you a little resume.

We have been threatened with war for more than a month and were really surprised that it didn't come sooner. Three years ago, Dr. Sun was driven out of Canton by a rebel named Chan Kwingsing. He invited troops from other provinces to help him regain his position, and among others the Yunnanese and Kwong-singites joined him. Since he came back all these troops have been in and around Canton. They as well as the Cantonese have added many tax burdens to the business men, and for their profit have allowed gambling and the opium traffic to have full sway.

About a month or more ago, the Yunnan and Kwangsi troops formed an alliance and have been threatening to grab the government. The Cantonese saw the battle coming, so they moved over across the river to an island and called Honam, which is

Fifteen Parade Up Streets; Fined On Charges of Gaming

The parade up Moulton street from the L. & N. crossing to the Albany city hall Wednesday afternoon was no oversize jury out for a stroll, neither was it a lodge procession out on parade. Officer West of the Albany forces had quietly dropped in on a friendly little game according to officials, and arrested fifteen negroes and ordered them to stroll to the city jail. Night court was held with the net result that fines were given fourteen of $11.60 each. The other was more fortunate being a cook and having his attention directed to his chores from time to time while the game was in progress. The afternoon entertainment cost the cook just $0.30.

Officer West made the arrest near the Moulton street crossing, Albany, where the negroes are said to have been gathered in an L. & N. section car indulging in the national pastime peculiar to their race. All defendants paid off with the exception of a pair who remain in the city jail.

PLAN CONFERENCE FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Prominent Speakers To Be Heard At Meeting At Westminster

Horace M. Layman, Sunday school superintendent for the Huntsville Presbytery, is here preparing a program for the Presbytery's young people's conference, to be held at Westminster Presbyterian church, with Westside Presbyterian and Willoughby Presbyterian co-operating, September 4 to 6, inclusive.

About 60 young people from the different congregations in the Presbytery are expected to be in attendance at the meeting, and several of the best known leaders in the work are scheduled to deliver addresses.

The conference will feature the four-fold program for instruction, worship, study and recreation.

An enjoyable feature of the program will be a picnic lunch on Saturday evening, September 5, at some attractive point, to be selected later. Each church in the Presbytery has been invited to send delegates to the meeting.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN made many speeches worth hearing and the world applauded.

What could the world give if he could come back and utter another speech of thirty seconds on "What I Saw, What I Felt, what I knew where I went, the minutes after I died!"

THE Rev. John Haynes Holmes, preaching in his Park Avenue church in New York, calls agnosticism a great help of the world. It is, he says, "A great spiritual philosophy, which has done more for the human beings than any other belief."

MANY will deny that. But this is certain: Agnosticism is the belief of those that say, "I do not know." And the man who realizes that he does not know, is often on the road to know something. But that does not apply in religion. There, no one knows anything, it is all faith.

The Rev. Mr. Holmes added, "My blood runs cold to think what Mr. Bryan would do if he had the power."

THAT was said before Mr. Bryan died, and it was too strong a statement. Mr. Bryan would never have done anything more cruel than to make others believe as he believed if he could, and he couldn't. He would have made his religious belief part of the constitution, if he could, but he could not have done that, either.

THE BRITISH government, to fight depression in British trade, will undertake international world advertising on a gigantic scale.

JUDGES TO PERMIT STAY TO REMAIN IN FORCE THIRTY DAYS

Commission Hearing Is Scheduled To Open Friday Morning

SPECULATION IS RIFE HERE TODAY

People Wonder What Effect Delay To Have On State's Action

Late this afternoon an A. P. dispatch to The Daily stated the hearing was halted temporarily when the judges decided to let the temporary injunction stand for 30 days, during which time the water company and A. P. S. C. were to attempt an agreement on rates. A second hearing will be held, if an agreement fails.

There was speculation again here this afternoon on the status of the water rate hearing of the Alabama public service commission, scheduled for the Decatur city hall Friday, as the hearing before three United States judges got underway, in Birmingham with indications that if both sides hear all of the witnesses the hearing may continue through Friday.

An Associated Press dispatch to the Daily this afternoon stated the hearing was begun before Judges Clayton, Walker and Grubb, in Birmingham, and many believed the hearings would not be finished today.

The hearing here is scheduled to begin at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning. City Attorneys Chenault of Albany and Callahan of Decatur are tied up in the Birmingham hearing and the effect of this feature on the Friday hearings was problematical.

The hearing Thursday is in connection with the effort of the Alabama Water company to have made permanent a temporary restraining order, recently issued, restraining the Alabama public service commission and the attorney general from interfering with the rates here.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 30—Hearing of the petition of the Alabama Water company to take the control of the Albany-Decatur water system out of the hands of the Alabama public service commission was begun today in federal court before Federal Judges W. I. Grubb, Richard N. Walker, of Huntsville and Harry D. Clayton of Montgomery.

The water company seeks to make permanent an injunction recently issued by Judge Clayton, restraining the commission from suspending water rates put into effect in the Twin Cities.

It is charged by the company, in spite of the increased price of production and the large amounts put into the water plant, the commission has, since 1920, persistently refused to allow the water company to make any increase whatever in its rates.

The company also asserts, in its petition, that the commission arbitrarily fixed the value of the Albany-Decatur plant at $500,000 in 1920, although this was far below what disinterested experts held the plant to be worth and it was on this basis that rates were fixed.

Since that time, it is charged, the water company has spent some $180,000 in improvements of the plant and it is shown that the company's operating expense has doubled and its taxes have trebled.

The increase desired by the water company amounts to approximately 10 per cent of the present rate. A number of representatives from both sides are to appear before the three judges and the hearing probably will continue through Friday.

GLENN BOGGS DEAD RESULT OF INJURY; CAR LEAVES ROAD

Eugene Moore Is Hurt And Harvey Pride Has Broken Ankle

TRAGEDY TRAILS PICNIC CROWD

All Occupants Of The Machine Suffer Narrow Escapes

Glenn Boggs, aged 17 years, popular young son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Boggs, Moulton street, was killed almost instantly last night when an automobile, driven by him, and occupied by ten young people returning from a picnic at Byrd Springs, went off the Bee Line highway, just south of the city. The accident occurred about eleven o'clock.

Eugene Moore, another occupant of the car, was severely hurt, but it was believed he would recover. Harvey Pride, a third member of the party, suffered a broken ankle when he was thrown about 25 feet from the point where the car left the road.

Paul Milan was thrown into a barbed wire fence, but escaped with but a few scratches. Miss Frances Dinmore and Miss Violet Winton escaped bruised and scratched. Other members of the party were believed to have been unhurt, with the exception of having been badly shaken and scratched. They included: Carl Handley, George Boggs, a brother of the deceased, W. C. Hughes, Burney Buchett.

Car Was On Way Home

The Boggs car was one of three, returning about eleven o'clock last night from Byrd Springs with a gay party of young picnickers. The motorcade had almost reached the city, members stated, when Glenn Boggs, in passing another car, struck the abutment of a small foot bridge, leading off of the highway. The car swerved and the driver pulled it back, only to have the machine cut too far and strike a culvert on the opposite side of the road.

The impact threw the machine over into a ditch, the car turning over. Survivors were unable to tell what Boggs struck, some believing that his head hit the steering wheel. His skull was crushed in several places.

One of the cars of the party stopped at the scene, a moment after the accident, and the work of rescue began. Those who were most seriously hurt were placed in the machine driven by Solon Grayson and rushed to the Benevolent hospital. Doctors Bragg and Greer were called, but it was discovered that Boggs was beyond medical assistance.

Mr. and Mrs. Boggs were notified of the accident and went immediately to the hospital, reaching the bedside of their son before his death.

The car's top was torn away, the windshield was broken and the fenders were damaged.

The youthful victim of the crash was well known in Albany and Decatur, having a wide circle of friends in the two cities. His death last night stunned the two cities and the bereaved parents have the sympathy of everyone in their hour of sorrow.

Funeral services for the youth will be held Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from the residence, Rev. J. D. Hunter pastor of the Central Methodist church, conducting the services. The deceased is survived by his parents, a brother and sister and his grandfather.

Pallbearers will be Harry Stinson, Solon Grayson, Billy Martin, W. C. Hughes, Paul Wilson and Ralph Sartor.

VISITS LIMESTONE

A three days tour of the churches in Limestone County will be started Saturday by Horace M. Layman, Sunday school missionary of the Huntsville Presbytery.

S.S.S. Makes You Feel Like Yourself Again

Jerry dismissed the subject with a shrug of her pretty shoulder. She had long since ceased trying to understand the ways of eager Rhoda and tired Theresa. She was going to the party, too, as well as Rhoda. Jerry was sure she would be at her class as usual the following day.

At ten o'clock that evening, radiantly lovely in a stunning little flame-colored gown of chiffon velvet, with pearls at her throat and swinging beneath the cluster of curls over her ears, snugly bundled in a great soft cape of finest kolinsky, she took a taxi to Rhoda's studio. And opening the door, in response to a muffled, strangled, "Oh!" on in, she stood aghast, staring, eyes wide, lips parted.

"Mimi's tallest, handsomest, rosiest floor lamp stood conspicuously in the center of the room, and on a rug directly beneath it, lay Rhoda herself, in a shimmering evening gown of gold and green, writhing, twisting, squirming, studying herself frowningly in a small hand mirror to get the effect of her contortions.

As the meaning of the curious pantomime burst upon Jerry, she broke into peals of merry laughter.

"Oh, Rhoda, you can't imagine how ridiculous you look," she cried.

Rhoda got up. She took Jerry's handsome kolinsky wrap and tossed it across a chair.

"You do it." She waved a light hand toward the picture on her easel. "See, it's like this. There's the lady. The lamp has to be there. It throws her face into shadow, see? And it's got to be clear and in a bright light. Now, how the dickens—"

Under her insistence, Jerry was obliged, flame-colored chiffon velvet and all, to sprawl out on the rug on the floor—turning this way, twisting that, head thrown backward, tilted higher, while Rhoda stood over her, scowling, criticizing, swearing softly beneath her breath, moving the lamp, now here, now there.

And after some ten minutes of painful effort on the part of good-natured Jerry, she suddenly found that a bright shaft of light fell directly across the lovely face on the rug. She cried out, joyously, clasping her hands.

"Hold it, hold it, Jerry!" she ordered. And caught up her brush to catch the light.

For thirty minutes the room was hushed with a great silence, while Rhoda worked feverishly at the picture, and Jerry, on the floor, almost held her breath in her fear of spoiling the effect.

Presently Rhoda clicked out the brilliant light beside the easel, sighing loudly in relief, and laughed. "Don't! That's fine! Much obliged, Jerry. You're the nicest little sport I ever saw."

At eleven o'clock, muffled in heavy wraps, they were in a taxi on their way to Brooklyn.

That was the night of Jerry's first studio party, the night of Carter Blake's "contract house," as it was affectionately recorded in the memories of his friends forever after. And that was the night when Jerry, basking warmly in the intoxicating intimacy of Duane Allerton's friendly smile, lost the glamorous illusion of her girlhood's tenderest dream.

CHAPTER IV

When Jerry Gave Up

It was four o'clock in the morning when Jerry reached her little studio apartment on Reilly's alley after Carter Blake's hilarious "contract house" in Brooklyn. She went in very slowly, very quietly, and placed her great fur cloak carefully on its hanger in the small closet. And then she set to work with the minutest care and orderliness, pinning together every penciled sketch, every laboriously painted tree and flower, every anxiously outlined face and figure that was even remotely connected with the pursuit of Art. When she had it all in one heap, she wrapped it in heavy paper and tied it with a stout cord. Then she cleaned her brushes with painful, painstaking intensity, closing every bottle and tube and jar of paint and oil, wiping them neatly and packing them all in their boxes. These she put away on the top shelf of her closet. Last of all, she released the supports of her easel and let it down, and then, with a great effort, managed to shove it into her bath closet behind the ridiculously small tub.

Jerry did not know why she did these things. She did not even wonder why. She only knew that she must banish every reminder of a dead passion—though really Art had never been a passion with her, but only a pleasant, juke-warm interest. When easel, sketches and paints were gone from her sight, she sighed a little wearily. She removed the flame-colored gown and went to bed.

At ten o'clock the next morning she went up to Theresa, carrying a gaudy tray, on which she had arranged a charming little breakfast with that daintiness which characterized everything she did. Theresa, who kept her door forbiddingly barred to Mimi, and to all the world besides, after the first few days of their acquaintance, had given Jerry a duplicate key.

"Come in whenever you like," she said. "You have an easy way about you that doesn't drive me wild, like everybody else. But don't knock! Just use the key and come right in! There's never any love-making to interrupt here."

Theresa's abhorrence to knocking was a frenzy with her. A state of nerves, Jerry called it, but Theresa, who never acknowledged nerves in any shape or form, denied it, although the slightest tapping startled her to such a degree that it was a physical pain.

"Oh, I'm off in the clouds, and it jacks me down to earth so fast it makes my teeth chatter," was the way she described the sensation.

There was a huge black and white sign on her door which read:

"For God's sake, don't knock. Cough, and I'll let you in, if I want to see you."

Jerry, with that delicate reserve acquired in twenty years with Prudence, would not for the world have intruded so brusquely even when invited to do so, and was always careful to approach slowly, with a slight clearing of her throat, fumbling a bit with the key, and then passing a long moment before opening the door, to give Theresa time to adjust herself to company, whether she wished for time or not.

Theresa looked up at her entrance and nodded briskly in greeting. The ress never said "good morning." She held that a nod meant welcome, and a frown requested your absence.

"Come and eat," Jerry said, without preamble. "You've got on my conscience so I can't sleep nights, thinking of you up here wasting away to a shadow, and for no good reason either. I'm expecting any time to find you've devoured your easel."

Theresa was thinner, wanner, the dark circles shadowing her brilliant eyes deeper and wider than before. She took the tray gratefully and balanced it on her knee.

"You are the nicest kid, Jerry," she said. "I am hungry. I wish I could mess about with a grill the way Rhoda does, but everything comes out burned, or raw, or too much salt. I haven't the knack for it, and it makes me peevish anyhow. The sight of a pan arouses all my evil instincts. I wish I had been born a cave man, and then I could eat my food raw—just catch a bird, and gobble him up."

"You're a cave man enough," Jerry warned her. "Don't wish for any more of it. Do you notice an improvement in my cooking? Rhoda has been showing me, and it's really rather fun. The rest, I'm glad that you don't mind my practicing on you."

They sat for a while in silence, Theresa drinking the hot coffee, nibbling the crisp toast, with warm appreciation. The silence was not unusual. Sometimes they sat for an hour saying not one word. Theresa worked steadily at her easel. Jerry curled up comfortably on the tumbled couch.

"I'm glad your eyes are blue," Theresa said suddenly, with one of her rare smiles. "I don't mind your staring about. Brown eyes give me the willies."

"Was I staring? I'm sorry," Theresa looked at her curiously. In Jerry's abstraction, she found food for conversation.

"Oh, I don't mind. I wonder if it is because your eyes are so blue that your lashes seem so cloudy, or because your lashes are so dark that your eyes seem so blue?"

"I don't know." Again Theresa swept her a quizzical look. "Or perhaps it is the midnight blackness of your hair, and the olive cream of your skin, that effects the subtle combination."

Jerry said nothing.

"Have a good time at the party?"

"Oh, yes, lovely."

"You're late for your class. I'm going to report you to the Amalgamated Middle West. You're supposed to be prompt."

"I'm not going to the class."

"Why not? Too much party?"

"I'm not going to study Art any more."

"Why not?"

"Because I can't paint. You know it all the time, didn't you?"

"Yes. How did you find out?"

"I don't know. It just came to me all of a sudden. Why didn't you tell me, Theresa?"

"You do very nicely, Jerry—for amusement—for passing away the time, and all that. You just haven't the spark, that's all."

"I wish you had told me, Theresa. Jerry was wretchedly abject in her despondency."

"Why should I? It amused you, and you have money to pay for any amusement that pleases you. If you had gone in professionally, expecting to make a career of it, a living—McDowell would have told you. But you were never really one of us, you know."

"You mean I—I am a misfit."

"Yes, a misfit," Theresa smiled upon her.

There was a huge black and white sign on her door which read:

"For God's sake, don't knock. Cough, and I'll let you in, if I want to see you."

Jerry, with that delicate reserve acquired in twenty years with Prudence, would not for the world have intruded so brusquely even when invited to do so, and was always careful to approach slowly, with a slight clearing of her throat, fumbling a bit with the key, and then passing a long moment before opening the door, to give Theresa time to adjust herself to company, whether she wished for time or not.

INDIAN PROFESSOR SAYS EAST IS ARMED AGAINST THE WEST

While The West Sought Physical, East Was After Spiritual

OPIUM MEETING WAS A FAILURE

Blames War Menace On West Instead Of "Peril"

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 30.—

Mentally armed against the West the peoples of the East have confidence in their spiritual strength and are prepared to oppose the strongest nations of the world for the sake of their rights even if in the struggle they have to dig their own graves.

This is the way John Jesudason Cornelius, a British Indian and professor of philosophy at Lucknow University, answered the question, "Is Asia a Menace to World Peace?" at the closing session of the Conference on International Relations from the Christian Point of View under the auspices of the Commission on International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches.

While the West has sought the conquest of physical nature, lands and peoples, he explained, the East has developed a spiritual civilization non-aggressive in character. For this reason, he asserted, the West has under its control 47,000,000 out of the 53,000,000 square miles of the habitable earth, and the white man dominates the peoples, the commerce and the economics of the world.

Deprecating that Australia with 2,000,000 square miles and one-fiftieth of the population of India, keeps out the colored races and that this is the policy of the white race everywhere, he declared that this "dog in the manger" attitude has caused "a very grave situation" and calls for "a fair international adjustment of territory so the crowded populations of the East may find an outlet somewhere."

Telling of the commercial exploitation of Africa and Asia in the name of civilization he spoke of the opium evil in China as follows:

"The recent opium conference was a failure! Why could not the American delegates with the admirable resolution do anything, when Chinese delegates were standing pleading that the most drastic steps be taken to suppress this awful curse on the life of her people? It was because of commercial interests. England's treasury must be filled with pounds of gold and China must pay it in pounds of human flesh! Who can estimate both China's moral and financial losses resulting from the encroachments of these self-appointed God's servants of civilization?"

"Extra-territoriality and concessions are due to commercial greed, and passion for the use of force in getting the commercial advantages desired. The weaker peoples have been captured by fraud, craft and brute force and on their own soil have been made hewers of wood and drawers of water by these heartless exploiters."

"When we think of the menace to world peace," he continued, "we do not in any way think of the acts of the West as endangering the peace of the world. We blame it on the yellow peril or China with her internal troubles, or India."

"We are living in the most interesting period in the history of the world; not most interesting because of the inventions to meet human needs, but because of the new state of mind, a new attitude in the so-called weaker races of the world. This new mental state is a challenge to the thinking Christians of the West."

"When the world is made a paradise for the white man to live in he is happy, but when the colored peoples of the world begin to feel that even in their own home they are made slaves by the white man, who pretends to be God's messenger of good will, peace and civilization, and begin to assert themselves, at that very moment they become perils and they are a menace to world peace."

The time has come for a new code of morals in international relations. Are the stronger nations going over to be selfish, grabbing everything they can get? Has not the time come for Christian men everywhere to think of the inalienable rights of men other than their own?

"The new mental state of the weaker races is a state of distrust in the stronger races and a confidence in their own spiritual strength. They are now prepared to oppose the strongest nations for the sake of their rights, even if in the struggle they have to dig their own graves. They now demand that the right of

Veteran Beaten; Is Left In Woods

Officers Told Hosts Suspected Old Man Of Being Informer For Them

(Associated Press)

SCOTTSBORO, Ala., July 30.—Seriously injured as the result of an alleged beating, J. P. Smith, a Confederate veteran, was found last night on a mountain road, near Paint Rock valley by Sheriff Henry Jones and a posse, after a search of two days.

Physicians in Paint Rock valley said that the veteran could not survive the beating.

Ed Garrett and his wife and her two children were brought to Scottsboro today and charged with assault with intent to murder, awaiting developments in Smith's condition.

The sheriff and the posse found Smith lying under an apple tree, after they had been attracted to the spot by a cry for help. They rushed him to a Paint Rock valley home, where a physician was summoned.

Smith regained consciousness and told the story which caused the inquiry.

The old man sought shelter at the Garrett home Saturday night, he told Sheriff Jones on the strength of an acquaintanceship with Mrs. Garrett. He declared that a lack of money had made the crops backward.

"The East has certainly lost confidence in the West. Now it demands that it be given the chance of bearing its own burden."

"When President Coolidge made known the idea of calling a conference to consider ways and means of rendering extra-territoriality Great Britain viewed the situation with a good deal of misgiving. She said this was not the time and if it was done now the prestige of Western nations would be lost. At present there is not much prestige of Great Britain or any other nation of the West to lose. The question of such Western prestige is now a matter of the past."

"The World War showed up the hollowness of Western civilization and its greed and passion to crush commercial rivals in the fight for world market. The greatest question the thinking Christians of the West have to face is the question of how to disarm the East, which has now mentally armed against the West."

"When such things have been done in the name of civilization is it any wonder that the peoples of the Orient, after suffering for many decades unspeakable misery and humiliation, are now working for an Asiatic compact to rid themselves of such debasing domination?"

"America, of all the Western nations, has held a high place in the minds of Oriental peoples. Her turning over the indemnity fund for the education of the Chinese students, her idealism which initiated the League of Nations, her generosity in giving lavishly for philanthropic purposes, these and many other noble qualities have captured their imagination and admiration. During the last decade or less, however, she has begun to show signs of isolation from world politics and too much concern about her own material prosperity."

"There is no other nation at the present time so advantageously situated for the controlling of world politics as America. With the new changes in the mental attitude of weaker races of the world and with their rising national consciousness, there has come to be an increasing demand that they be given the chance and the right to determine their own destinies."

"Will America realize her opportunity and responsibility for bringing about a new world order by emancipating these weaker races from slavery, or will she join hands with the exploiters of mankind in an Anglo-Saxon compact?"

"Let us not be led away by the crafty politicians. Let us think of a human pact or a compact of all races, speaking the human language of love."

Peck Gives County Crop Conditions

Returning from a visit to the Somerville section of the county where he visited his brother, G. W. Peck, C. L. Peck today declared that crop indications in the district are the finest seen in years with the possible exception of the district near Florette.

Mr. Peck said that cotton and corn crops from Somerville to Hartselle and west three fourths of the way to Danville are in splendid shape with indications of a very good yield. He declared that a lack of money had made the crops backward.

12 Years Ago From The Daily of TODAY

July 30, 1913

The "Newsboy" split a switch near the cemetery this morning and ran several hundred feet on the rails.

The first load of Morgan county watermelons were seen on the streets here today.

A DAILY PRAYER—We pray we may know Thee, in the yearnings of our hearts, in every breath we breathe and because of the law of righteousness within us.

After comparing a bathing suit of 1925 vintage with a model of 12 years earlier, we cannot help wondering why it is that the price is higher this year.

MRS. ROBERT M. LaFOLLETTE WILL NOT RUN FOR THE SENATE

Announcement comes from Madison, Wis., that Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette will not become a candidate for the United States senate, to succeed her late husband. Mrs. LaFollette gives no explanation of her decision, except that she does not choose a public career.

Had Mrs. LaFollette desired to make the race, many political observers express the belief she would have been elected. Her husband's name meant much in things political and his reputation would have carried her far in the political world, but could she have lived up to the standard of service which would have been expected of her? It is doubtful. There would have been many who would have been ready and willing to help her—for the sake of her late husband, but there would have been others who would have sought nothing but an opportunity to tear down the LaFollette name.

As senator, too much would have been expected of her. She would have stepped into a place in the councils of the nation which her husband had required many years of training and labor to attain. Inexperienced as she would have been, it would have been difficult for her to match in parliamentary wrangles and political battles even those lesser lights of the senate whom "Fighting Bob" found easy to subdue.

Mrs. LaFollette would have been treading a rocky road. Her decision to remain in civilian life probably is wise.

HUNTSVILLE STILL FIGHTING FOR ANOTHER BRIDGE AT WHITESBURG

Huntsville, it is surmised from expressions of The Huntsville Daily Times, realizes now that the bridge across the Tennessee river at this point is a certainty and is looking forward to the day when another bridge can be erected at Whitesburg or Guntersville.

The Times says:

Fine concrete bridge to span the Tennessee river at Albany-Decatur with contract already let and an enthusiastic determination to do similar work at one or more places further up the river makes the ambitious efforts more than of passing interest. Whitesburg Harbor and Guntersville Landing are two of the other points where wagon and road bridges are highly essential.

That kind of co-operation is helping to build up North Alabama. Albany and Decatur can be counted on to do anything in our power to help Huntsville and Marshall county to obtain a bridge up the river from here. The Twin Cities feel that the state highway commission did exactly the correct thing in ordering a bridge at this point at the present time, for, undoubtedly, it is needed here more than at any other point, but North Alabama is growing, and the need for a bridge at some up-river point will be increasingly apparent.

When funds are available for the purpose, Albany and Decatur are confident that other sections of the Valley will find the members of the state highway commission willing to co-operate with them, as Albany and Decatur have found the commissioners anxious to lend a helping hand to them.

WHAT CHANCE HAS HERRIN AGAINST PUBLICITY GIVEN TO DAYTON, TENN.

The plight of Herrin, Ill., is strikingly pictured by the New York World in an editorial which makes one wonder if the World does not feel a pang of sympathy for the obscure places, which have basked in the spotlight of publicity for a time, only to return later to the darkness of mediocrity after a time.

Herrin, the World compares to Dawson City, Shelby, Mont., East St. Louis, McKee's Rocks, Logan County, West Va., and even the famous Audist battlefields of Old Breckinridge. "History is never written backwards," the World laments.

Herrin, for a time, was the most talked of city in the United States. Strike riots and clashes between Klan and anti-Klan factions brought news reporters by the scores and the Herrin date line appeared on first pages of periodicals all over the United States.

The publicity was not favorable, but it was publicity, nevertheless.

Then came Dayton and its evolution trial. People almost forgot where Herrin is located.

The World describes an evangelistic campaign in Herrin which is said to have "turned everybody good and reconciled all the ancient blood-feuds" and Herrin tried to regain its lost position with a few scattering stories of the success the preacher had. Herrin could not "put it over."

"But the very idea of the spotlight is concentration upon one figure or on one activity," the World adds. "What chance in the news has Howard Williams, preaching 'Love ye One Another' in bloody Williamson county? A fine thing, no doubt, Mr. Williams' reconciliation of ancient enemies; but the waxing feud of science and religion, as interpreted in Tennessee, has the ear of the whole world, Herrin continues to occupy the back seat." Pity poor Herrin.

ALABAMA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION REPORTS AMAZING GROWTH

The growth of the farm bureau movement in Alabama, heretofore has been realized by some residents of Alabama, but the reports made at the convention of the bureau in Montgomery this week, will amaze many of our people.

The report of President Edward A. O'Neal shows that the business of the bureau has increased to such an extent that it now averages more than a million dollars a month. The bureau has been in existence only four years and yet during that short period, it has extended its organization into 62 of the 67 counties of the state and is still growing.

The success made by the bureau is a tribute to the ingenuity, the honesty and the ability to organize, displayed by the Alabama leaders of the movement. The organization in this state is using what is known elsewhere as "the Alabama plan" and other states are finding many benefits to be derived from its use.

The farm bureau not only is aiding its members in the marketing of their crops, but it is aiding them in buying the necessities for their farms. Reports at the convention recently estimated that farm bureau members saved $5.00 a ton on the fertilizer purchased through the association. That accomplishment, alone, is noteworthy, but the Birmingham Age-Herald finds one of the greatest achievements of the bureau is the restoration to the farmer of financial independence.

The Age-Herald says, in part:

"Not the least of the services of the federation also is its gradual elevation of the individual farmer to a cash basis of operation. The farmer pays cash for the supplies he buys through the local exchange. When he markets his crop there is no toll to be taken out leaving him the short end of the receipts as the reward for his year's work. This degree of economic independence is coming about slowly, but it is one of the fundamental steps the farmer must achieve, if he expects to make money and be rated as a real business man. Not the ability to obtain credit, but the capacity to pay cash is the criterion of good farming and marketing. Credit has been too easy and cash too scarce heretofore. That has been the whole trouble. To owe money is to be under an obligation. To pay debts is to become free of obligation. It is proper to borrow money when more working capital is needed, but it is an insecure situation when a large percentage of farmers must borrow money for their home supplies while their crop is making.

"The federation comes in the guise of a liberator to free the farmer from his economic bondage. It will be welcomed by farmers in proportion as they perceive its real service to them."

THE BRITISH COAL STRIKE

Anarchists and bolsheviks seem to be directing the plan to call a coal strike in Great Britain. It appears to be a part of the old scheme to break up the British government and substitute the red rule of the soviet. The whole business smacks of revolution. The English railroad employees threaten to refuse to haul coal and fuel of any sort while the strike is on and the "international unions" which are little better than organizations of communists, declare they will join hands and prevent European coal from being sent to England. The British miners are losing their patriotism when they accept aid from foreign countries. The very fact that they are dealing with European unions is proof that they are disloyal to the old Empire. The Birmingham Age-Herald makes this comment on the situation:

"Unlike the expected anthracite strike in this country, the impending coal strike in Great Britain assumes ominous proportions. Not only is it possible that British transport workers will refuse to move coal in storage or from abroad during the strike, but there is the active threat of sympathetic action on the part of the European international unions. If this occurs, then England will find it difficult, if not impossible to obtain coal from European fields. This extra-national association on the part of British labor is a direct blow at patriotic devotion to the mother country, such as has always been regarded as a British characteristic. Nor is it calculated to make material contribution to the well-being of the miners. On the contrary, it contains elements inimical to national unity and prosperity. If the British miners have a defensible grievance, it would successfully pass the test of arbitration. If they have not, then their acceptance of foreign aid is a challenge the government can hardly afford to ignore. The government has considered a subsidy to relieve the miners, but that is uneconomic and an evasion of the real problem. It is hoped the British will find a way out which will extend justice, avert a schism and yet will not cause any sacrifice of prestige or principle."

The British government will probably find a way out of the mess, but it is a serious business and is almost certain to give trouble in the future. The mine owners are probably mostly to blame for the fact that the situation is acute right now, but the miners cannot be justified in assuming a disloyal attitude. They are losing the sympathy of those clearheaded British citizens who believe that there should have been no suggestion of a cut in wages on the part of the owners.—Gadsden Times.

THE MARRIAGE of a young girl in the Vanderbilt family has caused newspaper discussion.

A protestant bishop performed the ceremony, although the mother is a Catholic and her daughters were brought up in the Catholic faith.

All that is the business of the family and of those immediately concerned.

But in one statement made by the family you observe the ancient wisdom of the Catholic church.

WHEN young Mr. Vanderbilt, a protestant, married Miss Fair, a Catholic, it was stipulated on the mother's behalf that all daughters born of the union should be brought up in the Catholic church.

There is wisdom. Daughters become mothers, influence the children and the men about them and form the next generation.

The mothers are the strength of every church and every religion. In the Bible they were the last at the cross and the first at the tomb.

The church that has the mothers on its side is the church that will survive, for mothers create and guide the children and influence the men.

VICTOR A. BERGER, socialist congressman from Wisconsin, and an educated man, better educated by 30 per cent than 60 per cent of the other men in congress, isn't going to run for La Follette's place in the senate and doesn't want "young Bobby" as he calls him, Senator La Follette's son, to be elected.

He thinks La Follette's son should first win his spurs, and adds that we have no room here for "Crown Princes."

MR. BERGER'S wide information fails him when he says: "You can't show me a single instance where sons have inherited the genius of a great sire."

What about Pitt, who is buried in Westminster Abbey in the same grave with his father, Lord Chatham? Those are two great men if there is any greatness in statesmanship.

And Filippo Lippi, as good a painter as his father, Fra Lippo Lippi?

What about Alexander the great whose father, Phillip of Macedon, was so able a man that the greater son feared his father would leave nothing for him to do?

And what about the great men whose paternity is uncertainty? There are many of them.

TWO young roughs, each a gang leader, engaged in a fist fight; and a blow on the head stretched Anthony De Lucca, seventeen, dead on the sidewalk.

The police will do something about this, because it wasn't a "regular," with ropes around the fighters, ruffians watching and gate receipts that make it profitable to violate the law. How long will the states disgrace themselves by licensing brutality?

ANYBODY can stand poverty, because almost everybody is compelled to stand it. We have plenty of practice. Few can stand prosperity.

Farm land on the edge of Detroit have boomed and farmers have sold out at prices never dreamed of. Now fifteen of the suddenly rich, according to doctors, are nervously unbalanced. The shock was too much for them. In poverty they could have kept their balance indefinitely.

Why the One-Profit* Coach Excels

—it is engineered and built complete by one organization—Studebaker. It is a perfectly co-ordinated, harmonious unit. This means better performance, greater comfort and increased mileage at an accepted coach price

AN AUTOMOBILE, like any other highly specialized machine, runs more smoothly—lasts longer—gives greater satisfaction—when its thousands of elements are carefully co-ordinated into one harmonious unit.

Obviously, a better car can be produced when all vital parts are designed, engineered and manufactured by one organization.

The Studebaker car is built on this "one-profit" principle. Not only all the engines, but also all the bodies, and all the axles, gear sets, differentials, springs, clutches, steering gears, gray iron castings and drop forgings are manufactured in Studebaker plants. This is not true of any other automobile in the fine car field.

The Studebaker, therefore, being built as a unit—functions as a unit—with all of the advantages of unit over assembled construction.

"Coach" in name—Coupe in quality

The Studebaker Special Six Coach is an outstanding example of the finer quality made possible by this "one-profit" principle of motor car manufacture.

This automobile is really a fine 5-passenger coupe, but is called a "coach" because it carries the lowest price at which an enclosed car has ever been sold on the famous Studebaker Special Six chassis.

In this Coach fine grades of upholstery are used. You'll find the same quality of workmanship and materials in all hidden places that you see out in the open.

Many of the superiorities of this Coach are invisible—and therefore all the more important. But here are some you can easily see and check against competing cars: gasoline gauge on the dash, 8-day clock; automatic windshield cleaner; rear view mirror, door pockets, rear window curtains, ash receiver, trunk rack, ornamental pull-cord, cowl ventilator, stop light; dome light; tire carrier locked by the same key that locks door, and the splendid coincidental lock to ignition and steering wheel. Lights are operated from a switch on the steering wheel which is left free for this convenience by the elimination of the spark lever. In all Studebakers the spark is automatically controlled by the speed of the motor.

*By a "one-profit" car we mean a motor car that, in its vital parts, is manufactured by one organization—thus cutting out the extra profits and overheads which arise when vital parts are bought from others. There are only two cars that can be thus classified, because—of all the makes of passenger cars built in the United States, only 2 make all their own motors, bodies, clutches, springs, axles, gear sets, differentials, steering gear, gray iron castings and drop forgings. One of these 2 is Studebaker and the other is Ford.

In its insistence upon comfort, this car is typically Studebaker. There is comfort in the extra heavy cushions—in the big springs—in the full balloon tires for which steering gear, fenders, etc.; have been specially designed—in the ease with which passengers may enter or leave the rear of the car—in the extra large windows and windshield.

You can buy all this style, comfort and performance at the price because this is the only "one-profit" coach on the market today.

Buy now—no "yearly models"

You may buy this Coach today—or on any day of the year—with the assurance that there will be no "annual announcement" to make it officially a "last year's model."

For Studebaker has discontinued the custom of presenting a new line of cars every year. Instead, Studebakers will be kept up to date all of the time.

Therefore you can buy this Coach in safety NOW.

Body of Bryan Is Taken to Church

Parting Benediction Given To Commoner By People Of The National Capital Today

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, July 30.—At the church where many times he sought God's guidance in his public service, William Jennings Bryan received a parting benediction today from the people of the national capital.
Brought here from Tennessee, where he died Sunday, his body was taken just before noon today to the New York avenue Presbyterian church to lie in state until noon tomorrow.
Then, after a short religious service, it will be entombed in Arlington with military honors.
Long before the bronze casket reached the little red brick place of worship, nestled in a triangle where New York avenue meets H. street, in the heart of the downtown district, reverent crowds had gathered to pay tributes to the commoner.
While they waited, another group had filed before his bier and looked upon his serene features as he lay for a little time in an undertaking parlor in another part of the city.
Special details of police were placed about the church to divert traffic and to guide a continuous slow procession that tramped in at the door and went past the silent figure at the altar.

less than half a mile across the river and parallel to the Bund (as the main street along the river front is called). Here they established themselves and began to get ready for hostilities. The Yunnanese on the other hand began to get things ready on this side. Last Friday night a week ago, they put sandbags and barricades all along the Bund. The "navy" meanwhile remained loyal to the Kuomintang or Cantonese party.
On Saturday afternoon at 4:30, the gunboats came up the river firing on the Bund, and disappeared around Hongkong. Before one could know what was happening, there were Yunnanese soldiers all along the Bund, behind the barricades they had built. They began to fire across the river at the troops, and those across the river answered in kind, but of course they didn't do much damage, on account of the barricades.
As our building was in direct line of fire, we didn't know just how we would fare. On Sunday afternoon I sent Tine and Marjorie to Hongkong. I remained here, but of course nobody could go along the Bund or main street. I would go to Shamene, (the British and French concessions) each day, but went out the back door and around through the Chinese streets. The firing continued for six days, and once one of the small gunboats came back up the river, firing full force with machine guns and small cannon, then returned to their shelter behind the island.
Most people thought the struggle would be long drawn out, with perhaps no decision until troops advancing on Canton should meet the outposts of the Yunnanese and Kwangsi troops outside the city.
But on the sixth day the Cantonese landed a force three miles east of the city and they routed the Yunnanese. By 3 o'clock in the afternoon, they had been joined by others who came across from the island under protection of the gunboats, and the whole Yunnanese crowd fled or surrendered.
We here in the building were not in any particular danger, so long as we kept our heads behind the walls. That they were showing in our direction may be judged by the fact that more than forty window panes in our building were broken by bullets. Our building has big pillars in front, which make excellent cover, so the Yunnanese built a brick barricade from pillar to pillar and quite a number lived under the portico the whole six days. I am sending you some snapshots to show how it looked after the "war" was over. Of course the store, like every other business house along the entire Bund, which is more than a day's walk, was closed the entire six days.
The worse thing about the whole matter was the action of the people after the fighting was over. Some Yunnanese threw away their arms, pulled off their uniforms and hid. During Friday night and Saturday morning, whenever the people would find anybody they suspected of being a Yunnanese, they would beat him nearly to death, then throw him in the river. Some were killed outright. It was awful to see the way some of them were beaten. I saw several such cases and it made my heart

COUNTY FARMERS TO COOLIDGE WRITES OF GATHER AUGUST 6TH VALUE OF BETTER AT HARTSELLE HALL MOVIE CAMPAIGN

Specialist Boyd To President Endorses The Talk On Vetch Move For Better Values Pictures

FORD ISSUES RATLIFF HEADS MEETING CALL THIS DIRECT

Cron Indication Is August 3rd Opening Not Yet Made Date Theatres Public Observe

J. C. Ford, county farm agent for Morgan County, today issued a call to the farmers over the agricultural sections of the county to gather at Hartselle city hall on August 6th at 9:30 for the purpose of hearing a talk delivered by Frank Boyd of Auburn, specialist on soils, fertilizers and crops. Mr. Boyd will use pictures to illustrate his talk.
Mr. Ford, recently returned from a short vacation period, resumed his duties as educator and aid to the Morgan county farmers today and stressed the importance of the meeting to be held in Hartselle. Mr. Ford declared, in the interest of the coming meeting, "if you want to learn how to make your soil rich at a little expense, come and hear Boyd and get the new knowledge of how to crop this crop."
Mr. Boyd is working in connection with the farm extension service and according to information given by the county farm agent, can greatly aid the farmer's in their problems of fertilization and soil building processes.
Indications of the growth and progress of Morgan county crops which believed to be the best, in many sources, seen in years, were not given by Mr. Ford. Weather conditions varying greatly at this season of the year, many are of the opinion that to predict the yield of the crops of the county is almost an impossibility. However, at this time, it is seen that the Morgan county yield will be on a par with years in the past with the probability that the year will be one of the best that the Valley section has enjoyed.
Despite the early season lack of rainfall, the burning up of the corn crop, and a possible damage to some of the other crops, Mr. Ford declared, the agricultural division of Morgan County is among the leaders in the state in crop production. Some farmers in this section take a most optimistic view of the situation. While they feel that the lack of moisture has hurt some yields, they can also see that some of the other crops have been benefited.
They likewise point out the advantages of a better marketing system in the county which they believe to be the result of a continuous effort to improve the county road system. Some portions of the county yet remain untouched by the road improvements which have been made, but the majority of the roads in the section have been looked after by the county forces and the problem of isolation no longer faces the majority of farm homes. Probably the greatest development along this line is seen in the development of the east and southeast section of the county where a complete circle of roadway has been established, reaching as it does, from the Valhalla-Somersville section, to Hartselle and around through Albany, Decatur. The county recently appropriated $20,000 to go toward the upkeep of Morgan county roads with specific projects laid out for immediate completion both in the Danville and Florette districts.

Believing that Greater Movie Season week will go far toward the establishment of better moving pictures generally over the nation and the possible change in the taste of the public toward a better class of pictures the following photographed letter from President Coolidge to Will H. Hays, one of the picture industry: The White House, Washington
Swampscott, Mass. July 13, 1925
Dear Mr. Hays:—
My attention has been called to the fact that you are taking the twenty-fifth anniversary of the moving picture industry as an occasion to inaugurate a Greater Movie Season Campaign. Such a movement to emphasize the desirability of worthy motion pictures will be of real public value. The progress that has been made in both education and entertainment is an outstanding achievement of the opening years of this century. I congratulate you and wish you a continuation of your success.
Very truly yours,
Calvin Coolidge

Some Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE
DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl sixteen years of age and am in love with a young man. About a week ago I had a "date" with him, but he failed to come. He hasn't called or come to see me since. I have tried to seem cordial and friendly to him in every way and I don't see why he has done this.
What is the wisest thing to do?

SISTER RUC: No matter what good reason prevented this young man from keeping his engagement with you, there is no excuse for his conduct. He should have telephoned you to explain, or, at the very least, written you afterward to apologize. I suggest that you avoid meeting him and make no effort to answer his friendly until he writes to explain his conduct.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: While attending a church wedding it is obligatory to attend the reception if it is held in the church parlor or in the home?
Is it permissible or, rather, good form to attend a wedding without your husband?

BROWN EYES: It is quite permissible to attend a wedding reception only if you are invited. If you are unable to attend, you should attend the ceremony without your husband and this is quite proper, merely see that he, too, suits the regalia.

Road Advertising Law Is Explained

There is a law which protects property owners, who desire such protection, against the painting, papering, pasting or otherwise placing of signs along the state highways it is pointed out by Judge William E. Skeggs. Judge Skeggs in a letter to the Birmingham News says:

I was much pleased by your editorial of this date under the caption, "Defiling the Highways," and am glad to inform you that the code committee put a "little joker" in the code of 1923 which can effectively end the nuisance about which you complain in your editorial, if you will inform the owners of the property along the streets and highways of Alabama.

"Sec. 2474. Bills, posting on buildings, etc. Whoever paints, prints, pastes, stencils or otherwise marks upon, or in any way places upon or affixes to any building, fence wall or tree, without the consent of the owner thereof, any word, letter, character, figure, sentence or device, or any handbill or notice shall on conviction be punished as provided in the preceding section." Fine of not more than $100 and may also be imprisoned in the county jail or sentenced to hard labor for the county for not more than three months.

The state highway commission has the authority and I believe has already taken steps to prevent the placing of signs on or otherwise "defiling" the state highways. "You tell 'em about it."

ALLEGED BANDITS TAKEN AFTER RAID

Fifth Member Of Gang Sought By Police Of Chicago

(Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 30.—Less than 24 hours after their daring raid upon one of Chicago's most pretentious hostesses, surviving members of a bandit quintette, who yesterday carried their plainmen's gun play to the soft velvet carpets of the Drake hotel today were in the toils of the law, facing true bills for murder and robbery with a gun.

Two of the bandit gang were dead; two in jail and a fifth at large, with a loot of perhaps $10,000, snatched from the cashier's cage in a gun battle with house detectives, in which Frank B. Rodkey, the cashier, was killed.

Indictments charging the surviving trio with murder were voted by a special grand jury today less than an hour after the presentation of evidence. An immediate trial was promised.

Stirred by the daring descent upon the residence district of Chicago's most wealthy citizens, the police maintained a vigorous search for W. J. Mellenchuk, fifth member of the band, who escaped with the loot.

He, with two companions already in custody, Jack Woods and Joseph Holmes, face trial for the murder of Rodkey.

GORE CASE BEFORE GRAND JURY TODAY

Detectives Relate To Probers The Story Told To Them

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 30.—The case of David B. Gore, mine operator, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death Saturday night of Mrs. Bessie Lawson, 27, was before the Jefferson county grand jury today.

Other witnesses appeared before the inquisitorial body, after City Detectives Riley and Hubbard, who made the initial investigation, testified yesterday afternoon. Charge of involuntary manslaughter was placed against Gore, following the coroner's inquest.

Officers Riley and Hubbard state that they had evidence which was not presented at the coroner's inquest. The death of Mrs. Lawson, following a party in a local hotel is shrouded in mystery. She was found in a dying condition on Highland avenue, near the Country Club, by Gore as he returned to the scene where a few minutes before she had abandoned his automobile.

Gore, with the assistance of Eddie Marbury, negro, and Felix Best, white man, placed the girl in his automobile and rushed her to St. Vincent's hospital. An examination there showed she was dead. The supposition is she was run over by an automobile.

TO BE WELL-BORN IS EVERY CHILD'S RIGHT

Healthy Parents Beget Healthy Children—Proper Care of Expectant Mother Gives the Child a Better Chance at Life.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

It is a general rule that healthy parents beget healthy children. Of course, intervening and accidental causes may impair the physical welfare of the offspring of perfectly normal parents. But it is pretty safe to assume that ancestral health is of vital importance to the baby and guarantees his physical prosperity.

More important than anything else, the blood of both parents must be untainted. It cannot be pure without moral living.

The seven or eight months before the birth of the baby are of vital importance to its future welfare. What the mother eats, how much she exercises and sleeps, how cheerful and calm she is—all these things are fundamental to the welfare of the little one.

The next matter of importance is the sort of treatment the baby has at the time of his birth. Carelessness or ignorance applied now may ruin his future. Out of every thousand babies born seven are cripples. Many are blinded by lack of care at birth.

It is a crime against humanity to permit the physical neglect of mother and baby at this critical period. No community can be called civilized unless it offers means for the decent treatment of the expectant mother and child. If private enterprise does not supply it, then the public must find a way to care for these important members of society. A skilled doctor and a good nurse are essential to every locality.

Hurried or undirected childbirth is responsible for much misery in this world. This is a matter of concern to the entire community. Almshouses and institutions are filled with persons who are the victims of neglect at birth.

If anybody in the world is in need of advice and instruction, it is the young mother. For her own sake she needs care and advice before the baby is born. For the sake of the child she needs this before and after the birth.

One of the hopeful signs of the times is the growing readiness to talk about these matters. The great privilege in the world is the love of motherhood. We are not prone to keep our love to ourselves and certainly this one deserves to be talked over, at least with the doctor or some other informed person.

The right advice at the right time will save heartaches and suffering, the effects of which may continue through a lifetime.

TEMPERANCE BOARD FEELS A GREAT LOSS IN BRYAN'S DEATH

Wire Tells Of Work Of Commoner For Welfare

NO CRITICISM WITH ANDREWS

Mellon Is Left Out Because Of Original Business

Telegram to Mrs. Bryan

The members and officers of the Board of Temperance Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church send to you a message of heartfelt sympathy. No man in American history made a greater or more significant contribution to the moral welfare of this country than did William Jennings Bryan. Uncounted generations of the future will be in his debt. The scores of millions of Americans who loved and honored him will revere his memory.

Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church.

No Conflict With Andrews

The statement attributed to the Anti-Saloon League that prohibition will never be adequately tested until enforcement is in the hands of its friends implies no criticism of General Lincoln C. Andrews. The statement is obviously true and justified. Prohibition enforcement should be in the hands of its friends from top to bottom. Every United States official, whether connected with the Prohibition unit or with federal courts, every investigating officer, every prosecuting attorney, every United States commissioner, every United States marshal, should be a supporter of the American policy of liquor suppression.

Mr. Mellon, the Secretary of the Treasury, because of his associations and his interest in the whiskey business in former years was not considered by prohibitionists as the proper person to be in charge of enforcement. But there is circumstantial evidence that, so far from hampering prohibition enforcement at the present time, Mr. Mellon is following a policy of absolute non-interference and of sympathetic support of his subordinates charged with enforcement of the Volstead law. We believe that General Andrews is being allowed a free hand. Mr. Haynes should have it. Being a gentleman and a soldier, the General is the friend of prohibition because he is the enemy of law-breaking, just as during the war against Germany he was a whole-hearted supporter of his country against its external enemies.

The frequent assertion that 'prohibition is having its last trial' is simply father to the thought. Prohibition will never have its last trial in America, no more than the republican form of government will have its last trial. One objective and only one is in view: satisfactory enforcement. And this objective will be reached no matter whether it takes five years or one hundred years. Prohibitionists are prepared to fight it out on this line for uncounted summers, if necessary, and their children are prepared to take up the battle for America against liquor treason when this generation has passed from the scene.

Sad as the news may be, however, to the enemies of prohibition, this will not be necessary. The cord of enforcement is tightening about the neck of the bootlegger and the time of his end may be mathematically computed. A few more years and the inevitable will be with us.

NO FIRE DAMAGE

Youth Enjoying His First Vacation

(Associated Press)

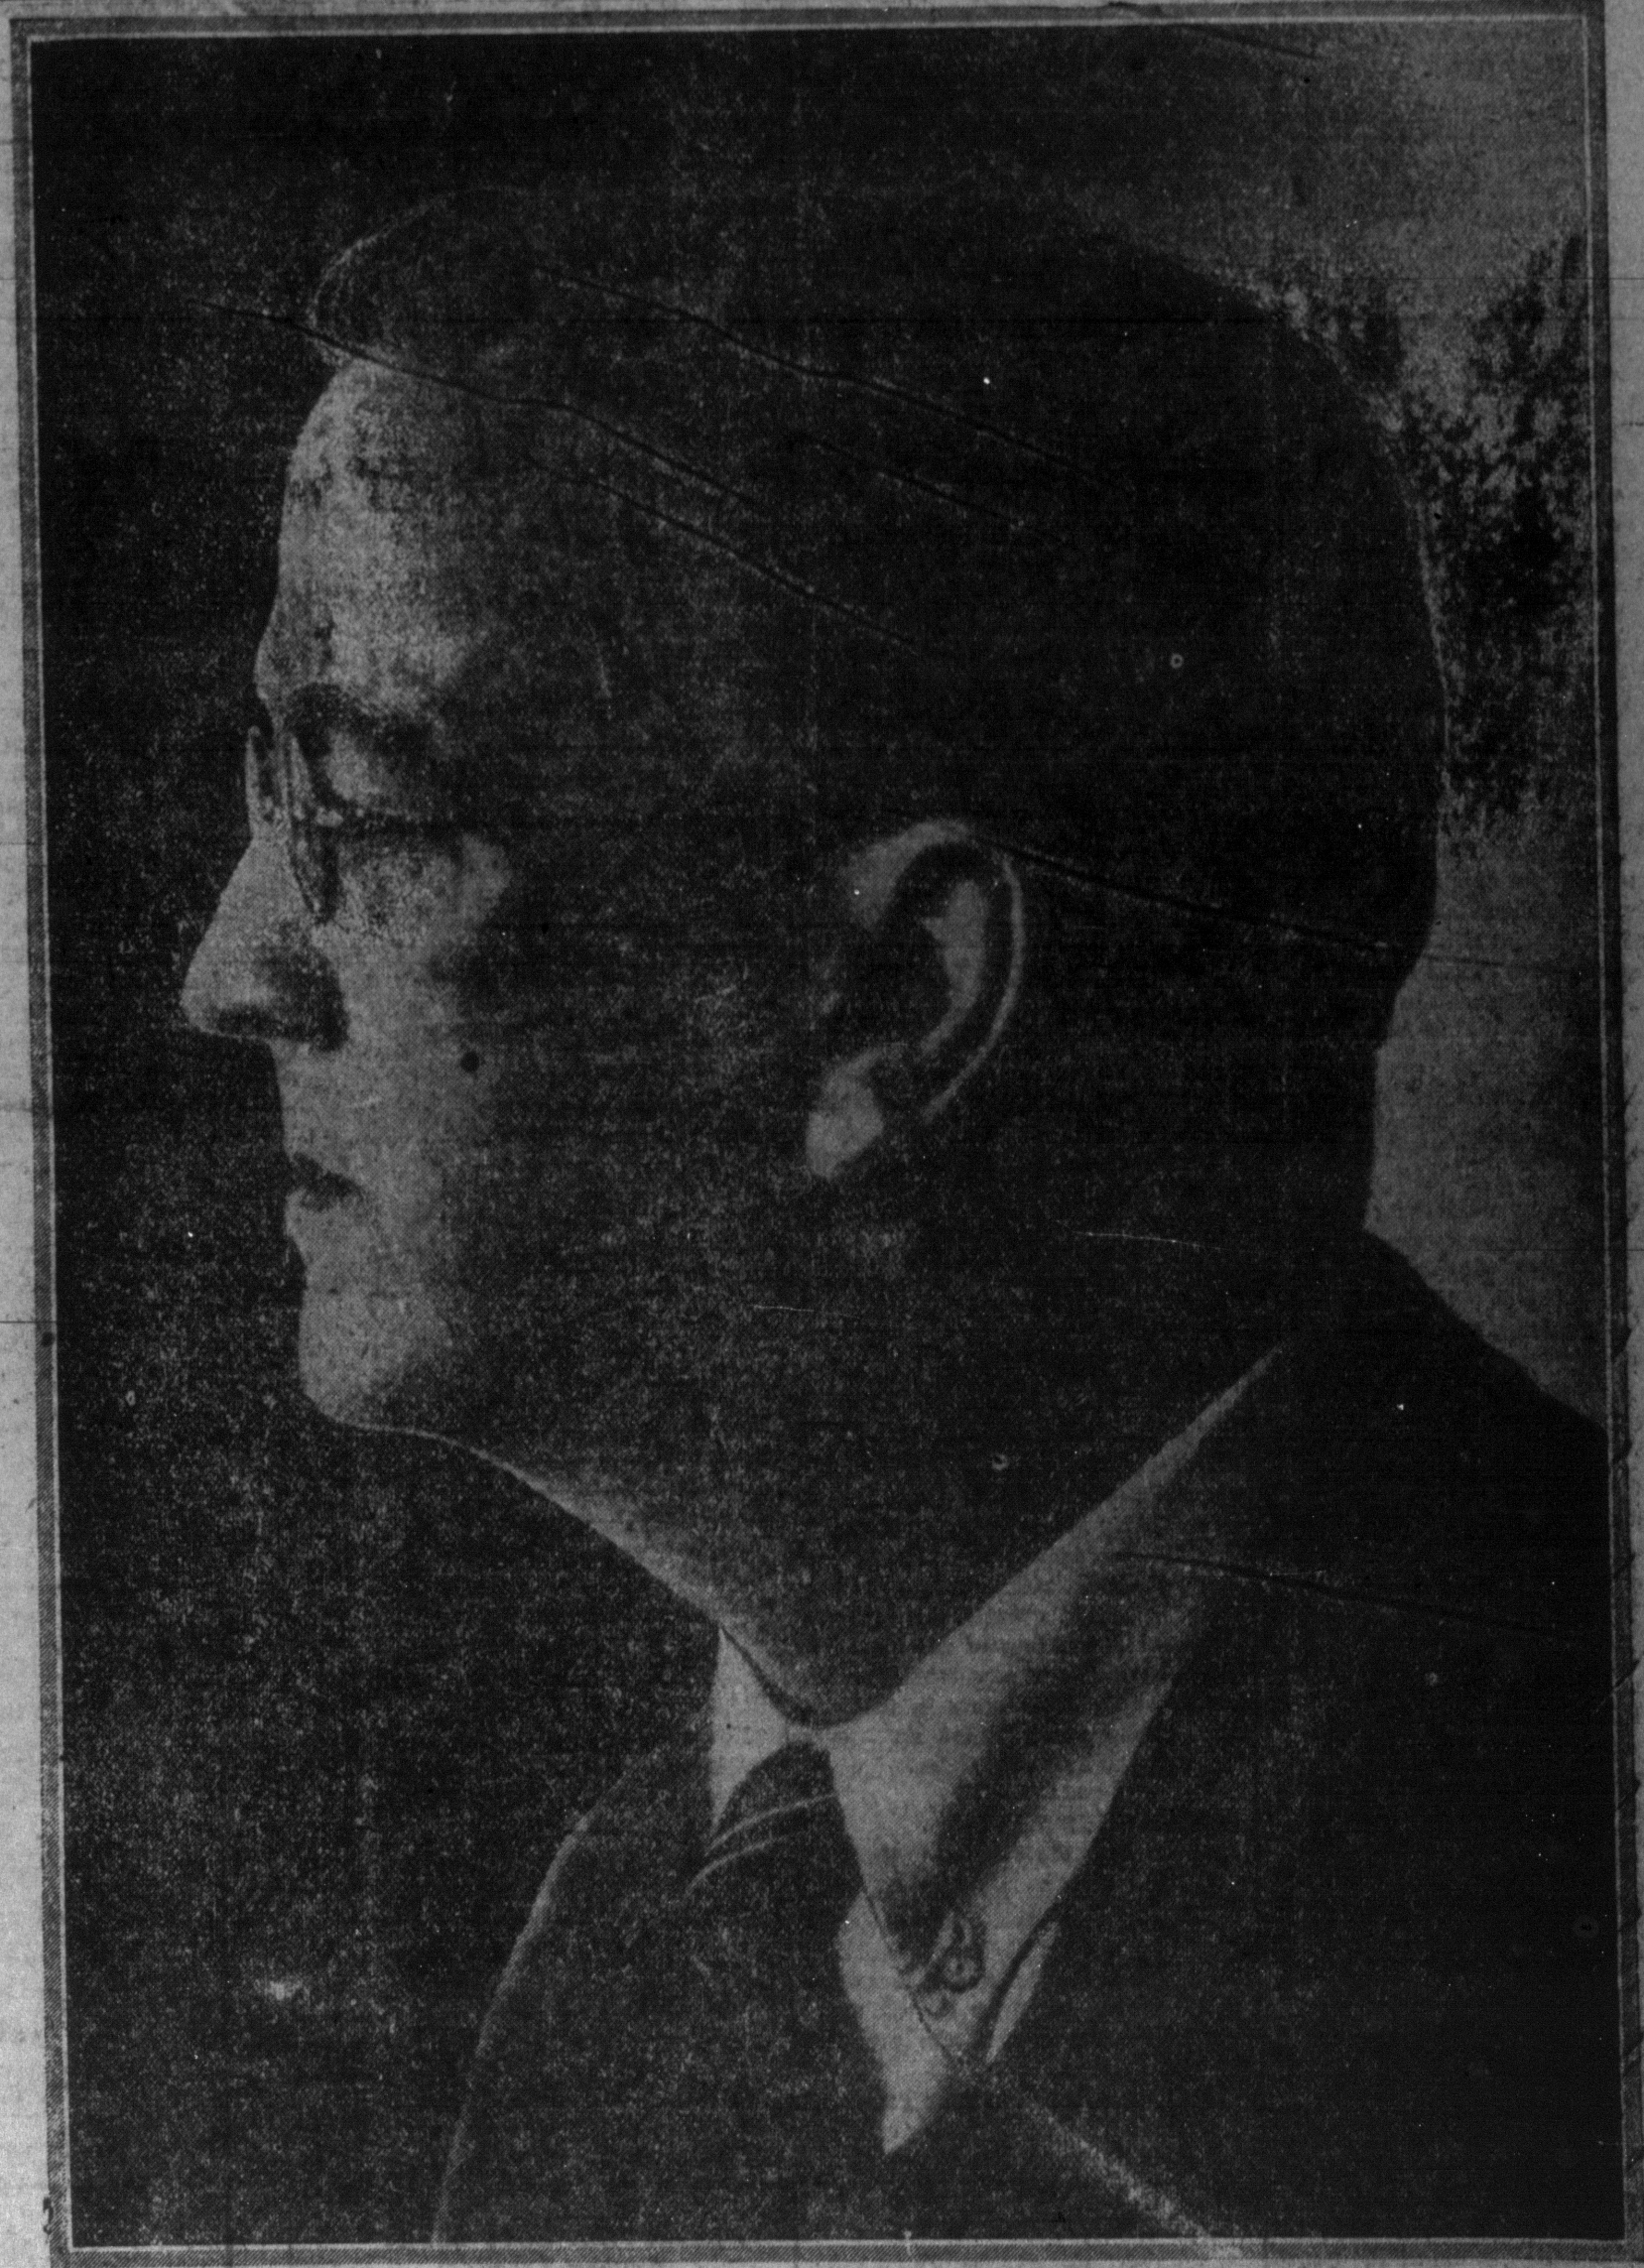

PRATTVILLE, Ala., July 29.—People here are just beginning to realize just how happy a vacation can make a person who has never had one before, with the advent of Joseph Miles Joseph is a 15 year old orphan who has come to the home of C. V. Lamar near here from the Boys Industrial school at Birmingham where he has been for the last year.

Mrs. E. B. Lurton, probation officer of the juvenile court was the cause of Joseph's vacation directly, while Mr. Lamar and the power of the press aided. Mrs. Lurton had promised the lad a vacation if his conduct at the school was good, and school authorities say that it has, so on the fulfillment of his promise to be good, Joseph's vacation immediately became a problem. A Montgomery newspaper was advised of the fact that Joseph was due a vacation and a story in the columns of this paper brought in a cash fund in addition to Mr. Lamar's offer to take the boy on his farm for an outing and give him a home if he wants it.

Now the lad knows what it means to be really happy, if reports from the farm are any indication, and it seems that Joseph's main problem at the present time is finding enough space to pack away fried chicken and peaches and all the other delicacies that one finds on a farm in Alabama.

The result of it all may be that Joseph will get a permanent home and a new 'daddy.' Mr. Lamar will get a son and Mrs. Lurton will get the satisfaction of knowing that she has solved one deep problem of humanity, all through the 'power of the press.'

Athens Gathers Verdict In Third Tilt With Anniston; Moulders Are Shutout

Athens blocked all attempts of the Anniston Moulders to make the count three in a row Wednesday when the Limestone products ended the two day winning streak of the Moulders with Snake Banes working in fine form. The Athenians romped to the tune of 3-0.

Banes, former Howard college star, stopped the hard hitting Anniston outfit with three safe blows and was free in issuing no scoring permits to the Moulder advocates of victory.

Athens in the meantime was pounding out seven hits off Red Hawkins with Turner, Athens outer gardner, pasting the apple on three trips to the plate for a single, double and triple. The two teams resume the series today at Anniston with the series standing in favor of Anniston 2-1.

Anniston support cracked badly behind Hawkins, a quartet of errors being contributed toward the downfall of the Moulders hurling choice. Athens played jam up ball with a single error being chalked against them.

Rev. R. W. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church will leave Friday for Picken county to attend the annual camp meeting in progress near the Mississippi line. Several years since Rev. Anderson did much of the preaching at the services there, and recently received a pressing invitation to be present at the coming service.

P. G. Kimbrough and son Pat, who have been spending sometime at Tampa and Miami, Fla., arrived back home Tuesday afternoon and bringing glowing accounts of the real estate and building boom in those southern cities.

Rev. G. C. Walker is at Ardmore this week holding a series of revival services. His pulpit will be occupied next Sunday by Prof. W. T. Tiller, principal of the M. C. H. S., who has been for sometime at Chicago, Ill.

where he has been taking a special course during the summer and is expected home this week.

The Hartselle Community club held another enthusiastic meeting last Tuesday night in the basement of the First Christian church. A feature of the meeting was the address by Mayor Robertson of Cullman, who brought to the members an enthusiastic and encouraging address along the line of work contemplated by the club. At the conclusion of the meeting lunch was served in the basement of the church by the ladies of the Christian church.

L. G. Gulley and family who have been spending the past month with relatives at Quannah, Texas are expected home this week.

Large quantities of both cedar lumber and logs is being placed on the loading yard of the L. & N. for shipment by L. G. Gulley local cedar timber dealer. Mr. Gulley plans to place a mill here this fall, and will saw the logs into lumber for shipment.

Many Hartselle citizens are taking the advice of the county health officers and are being inoculated against an attack of typhoid fever. County health officer Dr. H. C. McRee of Decatur is here each week, where many meet him at the city hall and take the serum.

The finest quality of watermelons raised in this section reach the market daily, and are pronounced the best in several years. The Philip Jones and Kleckley Sweet lead the list, and find ready sale to the local dealers.

Mrs. J. A. Shipp who has been sick for the past several weeks at the family home north of town on the Bee Line highway with typhoid fever is reported as now convalescing.

A truck load of new sweet potatoes have reached this market from Cullman and are retailing at 10c per pound.

It is understood that the Hartselle Community Club went on record at their last meeting held last Tuesday night, for a public play ground. Committees were appointed to look after this matter, as well as a band stand where community meetings can be held and song and musical programs carried out.

The committee is to report their progress on these two important matters at the next regular meeting.

T. J. Russell prominent planter on Hartselle R. F. D. 3 was in town on Wednesday and said that he had one hundred and fifty acres of corn that was fine. He is counting on around three thousand bushels at gathering time. Mr. Russell also said that cotton was fine and that no pest was hindering the progress of the plant in his section.

It has often been remarked by those who knew conditions well in this county that, a fence could be built around Morgan county and that her inhabitants could live irrespective of the outside world, so far as material things go. A look at the various articles of produce brought to this market almost daily bears the statement out well. Not to mention the varied lines of vegetables marketed here daily, the following articles of native Morgan county products adds truth to the statement. Wheat, oats, alfalfa hay, soy bean hay, sweet and Irish potatoes, peaches, apples, plums, strawberries, raspberries, pears, grapes, damson plums, quinces water melons and canteloupes, corn, rye, millet, vetch, clover, crimson and red, pork, (a single side of meat raised in this county and marketed here weighing 128 pounds) butter and cream, grade A milk, and many other articles of stock feed and human diet not above mentioned.

Lumber stocks of various kinds including native cedar, walnut, oak, pine, etc.

Innumerable mountains of limestone rock grading above 90 per cent calcium, sand, stone quarries, fine sand beds, gravel beds, different clays for brick and tile, and there are coal mines in various parts of the county the product having been marketed in a small way, and pronounced fine.

The county's strongest asset perhaps is her various kinds of rich soil, varied as can be found in any locality, produces yearly millions of dollars worth of farm produce, and millions yearly goes to waste.

With the foregoing statements, it would seem that Morgan county people would not be compelled to ship in commodities from the outside, if small manufacturing were installed to work up the raw materials and verily we are a favored section, as we raise practically everything we ship in from other sections.

Tremendous Sale Of 10 Million Packages St. Joseph's Medicine Each Year Unequaled

Druggists Say They Give Sincere Universal Satisfaction They Are Gladly Recommending Them.

So few things which are offered to the approval of the public gain even a small degree of success, that when the now famous St. Joseph's medicine passed the ten million mark last year it was an achievement to be proud of and to be regarded with significance by the big multitudes of people who find it necessary to use medicines in their homes.

St. Joseph's G. F. P., the phenomenal medicine which women and girls now depend on to restore their vitality, is believed to be the first direct specific for so-called "female trouble"—which have now been proven to be caused by catarrh of the generative organs.

St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (in the BIG 25c CAN) is correcting chronic constipation so regularly and unfailingly that its fame has spread more quickly than anything of a familiar nature.

Druggists everywhere are now familiar with all the St. Joseph's medicines, and it is suggested that when you need the help of the peculiar merit of the remarkable preparation to correct some acute or chronic condition in your system, ask your druggist first. In many cases he can spare you disappointments, and long draw out periods of suffering and discomfort.
